Star, ~~currently~~ you are unilaterally breaching our agreement.
If you don't do the right thing very very soon, I will expose to the whole world your lying, cheating and disregard for the truth.
You are damaging your own, your company's, and Bitcoin's reputation.

I will redirect bitcoin.com to Bitcoin.org to mitigate the damages you are currently causing to Bitcoin as a whole.

Jack,
I've met you in person several times, and you should be embarrassed to have anything to do with these sort of people.
For your own reputation, I suggest you quit working for OKcoin as of today.

I wish you all the very best, but I don't have patience or sympathy for liars and dishonest businessmen.

Roger Ver

Star,

~~Your wish is my command.~~
I have CCed Jon Southurst, a reporter for Coindesk on this email, and I have included a copy of the contract for his reference.
~~I'm sure he will put together a great story outlining all the lies and games plaid by you and OKcoin.~~

Jon,

You have a lot of reading to do, but myself and Daniel Kelman are happy to help you figure out everything that went on.
I hate doing this, but the world deserves to know what a bunch of liars the team at OKcoin are.

Thank you all,

Roger Ver

Mr. Ver threatened to make the private communications public. Mr. Ver later acted to do that by adding Coindesk reporter Jon Southurst to the conversation.
